One school district in Lane county, located in the mountains at Jones sawmill, has levied a 90-mill tay. The district has just been organized and it is desired to raise $500 for the purpose of building a schoolhouse. The small amount of taxable property makes the high tax necessary.

The matter of levying an occupation tax in Toledo, in Lincoln county, is being talked of. It is proposed by some of the business men that the city ievy a tax upon each business, the tax to be graduated according to the volume and extent of the business done, and payable quarterly, and that this tax be set aside into a fund for the purpose of fire protection.

A story is coing the rounds in Umatilla county to the effect that Joe Hinkle, a school teacher at Jumper, probably owes his life to some of his scholars. The report has it that Mr. Hinkle fell asleep with his feet in the stove during school recess last week, and his shoes and trousers were on fire when some of his scholars rushed in, roused their teacher, and saved bim.

Wednesday morning of last week, at about 9 o'clock, E. P. Thorp, editor of the Cottage Grove Leader, was found lying dead, face down, in a pool of water a quarter of a mile east of that place. A coctor who arrived at the place soon after, said that Thorp was stricken with a severe stroke of apoplexy. He was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and belonged to the Masonic order, by which he was buried. Mr. Thorp was in the newspaper business about 25 years, and was about 55 years old.

State School Superintendent Irwin has reversed the decision of County Superintendent Waite, in the Civil Bend, Douglas county, school district case, setting aside Waite's division of the district. In his decision the superintendent holds that a legal voter in a school district means both the father and mother of children as well as taxpayers, and that the Civil Bend discrict, therefore, contains 58 legal voters. It is understood that the Dillard people will have the case reviewed in the courts on the ground that the superintendent's decision is not good

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON

Free Courses of Study by Correspondence.

To meet the needs of large numbers of people, both old and young, who ployed to expert the books of Josephine | live in remote sections of country or in places where the schools are not advanced, the University of Oregon has made arrangements to conduct a four years' course of study by correspondence. The plan is to make this course entirely free except a small charge which will cover the actual expenses. This charge will be in the form of a small sum for each lesson sent out. It will not exceed what is actually paid out for postage and clerical work in conducting the course. Students will be expected to order their text-books either through local dealers or from the Portland book stores. It is hoped that large numbers of people will avail themselves of this opportunity to do intellectual work under competent guidance. It is also hoped to interest the press of the state in the undertaking so that it may become very widely known. No newspaper can be paid for publishing the announcement of the course, since it is not a plan for making money, but it is hoped that a wide-spread public spirit may be awakened and that the press will lend its powerful assistance toward the success of the work. The course will be divided into five departments of study -English literature, Latin, history and civies, mathematics, science. Four years of work have been planned in each of these departments. Any person may take up one or all of the de-

> The course will be conducted as follows: Any person who wishes to take one or more of the studies may send in his name to the University of Oregon, Eugene, Oregon. The words "Exten-sion Department" should be written on the envelope. He should also state clearly what lines of study he wishes to take up. Directions will be sent to him at once for procuring text-books, and instructions concerning the details of the course.

covering definite portions of the textbooks from time to time as they are needed. These should be carefully answered and the answers mailed to the Extension Department of the University. They will be corrected and returned, together with a new set of questions. This is, in brief, the scheme of the course. The university has been carrying on this work in a limited way for two years, but it is now hoped to make it much more extensive and more generally useful to the people of the state. The experience of the past, however, places the extension department in a position to manage the practical details of the course accurately and promptly. The only charge which will be made will be for the lists of questions and for marking the answers which are sent in. It is thought that this can be reduced to ten cents for each set of questions and ten cents for examining each set of answers. This small fee will probably cover the actual expenses of the course, and nothing further is desired by the de-

It is to be noted that this course is open to all persons who desire to engage in study. It will cover the ground of the usual good high school course, and the questions and suggestions which will be sent out may often be used with profit in reviews and examinations in city high schools. No person should feel that a course of this kind is a complete substitute for a good school, but if the school is not available for any reason, then much advancement in sound learning may be made by taking a correspondence

Full outlines of the course will be sent free upon application.

A Lucky Find-After Six Years.

R. N. Park, of College Hill, says the The literary society was called to Eugene Register, was happily sur-rder by the new president, Jus. Blackfrom the finder a handsome crescent diamond pin which he lost six years ago this coming June.

The pin was found by Jim Day, who early last week started out from the Middle Fork of the Siuslaw for the valley. From the upper Middle Fork country to the head of tide is a trail, called the Middle Fork trail, which is used frequently by the settlers of that vicinity, as it shortens the distance considerably. Mr. Park, six years ago, came out over the trail, and on this trip lost the pin in question. It was crescent shape and had a cluster of seven diamonds, of the value of $100. Notwithstanding that Mr. Park searched high and low for the pin, he was in the end compelled to give it up as gone forever.

Last week, says the Register, as Jas. Day was coming over the trail he noticed something just ahead of him with a brilliant sparkle, and so picked it up, to be agreeably surprised upon seeing Mr. Park's pin. As soon as Mr. Day reached Eugene he hunted up the owner and presented it to him. Mr. Park would not have been more surstruggle for liberty. Great enthusiasm | prised if some one had hit him with a club, and in appreciation of the return of the lost article, he told Mr. Day that there was a nice 3-year-old cow down on his Slusiaw ranch, and that upon his return to just go and turn her into his own band.
